Library and Community Hub

The library successfully re-opened a good few weeks ago and our arrangements to help keep people safe are well established. These are the measures we have now all become familiar with, hand sanitiser for use on entry, a one-way system and a limit on numbers in the library, as well as government guidelines being followed for face covering and track and trace. Specific to the library is that any returned books are quarantined for a minimum of 72 hours before being made available again.

So, with the winter months upon us there is the opportunity to curl up with a good book and you are welcome to come in and browse and make your choice from our wide range. Alternatively if you wish to reserve a book from any of the entire Lincolnshire Libraries stock you can do that on line and you can then ask to collect at Welton library. Books ordered in this way have also been quarantined for a minimum of 72 hours and are stored in a separate section in the library to those that anyone can browse which is another way to help reduce the risk of infection or transmission.

If you have a library card you will have been issued with a PIN to use on the Lincolnshire Libraries website to be able to make book orders but don't worry if you can't remember that or have lost it as you can easily get it replaced by ringing the library helpline on 01522 782010.

If you are not a library member or your membership has lapsed you can either call in at the library, ring the helpline number or go to the Lincolnshire Libraries website to join or renew your membership.

Stay safe and remember that in these strange times between the pages of a book can be a lovely place to be.

Finally, a reminder of our opening hours in November (subject to volunteer availability):
