

STONECLIFF PARK

I'm reminded of a primary school playground some 80-odd years ago when we scruffy little lads watched little girls and a big skipping rope. Very rarely did they trip up and give us a laugh; but relentlessly intoned "This year, next year, sometime, never". Sounds like a precursor to present-day events, with June 21st receding into the distance as we wait for July 19th.

We were hoping to announce the re-opening of club social activities, like bingo, quizzes, full-blown coffee mornings and table top sales, raffles and darts night, etc. We managed to get the library up and running and recommenced the ladies' Movement to Music mornings, observing social distancing. So, it's keep your eyes on the notice boards, ears to the Stonecliff grapevine and cross off the days on the calendar.

As they say, "It won't always be dark at six!". As long as they save some of this warm weather for our eventual BBQs etc.

Cheers!
